In this paper, we will present an overview of the Reserve Component Automation System (RCAS) software architecture and show how this architecture encourages software reuse. We will show the process for developing reuse assets and give some examples of the types of assets that were developed with this process. We will give lessons learned from our experience in developing software reuse components using this architecture.

Context-enabled applications are just emerging and promise richer interaction by taking environmental context into account. However, they are difficult to build due to their distributed nature and the use of unconventional sensors. The concepts of toolkits and widget libraries in graphical user interfaces has been tremendously successtil, allowing programmers to leverage off existing building blocks to build interactive systems more easily. We introduce the concept of context widgets ...
